

Division Description

Since 2014, the City, under the leadership of then-City Council President and now Mayor Andrew J. Ginther, has invested time and resources to address and reduce the infant mortality rate in Franklin County through the collaborative effort called CelebrateOne. At its inception, CelebrateOne was administered by Columbus Public Health but in 2017, was transferred from Columbus Public Health to the Office of the Mayor in order to further prioritize the work of this initiative. In 2021, legislation was passed to establish the new Office of CelebrateOne to ensure future generations have the opportunity to thrive.

Division Mission

Every child in every Columbus neighborhood deserves the opportunity to thrive.

The Office of CelebrateOne is focused on eliminating preventable sleep-related deaths, reducing preterm births, and improving service delivery to those most impacted by health disparities in our community.

The Office of CelebrateOne works with other City departments and community partners to promote safe sleep practices, teen reproductive health education, and provide assistance to pregnant women living in highly unstable housing.

2023 BUDGET NOTES

The Office of CelebrateOne's budget of $1,837,698 represents a critical contribution in strengthening the infrastructure that will support the community's efforts to ensure every baby, regardless of race or zip code, celebrates his or her 1st birthday. These funds will allow CelebrateOne and its partners to:

- Deepen work targeting the racial disparity gap in the infant mortality rate;
- Accelerate efforts to address the Social Determinants of Health; and
- Strengthen coordination between the health and social service systems.

Additionally, CelebrateOne's budget is a direct investment in many of the strategic priorities of Mayor Ginther's administration, including but not limited to: neighborhoods, birth to five, and diversity and inclusion.
