City and county officials to host Big Table conversation on collaborative efforts to address domestic violence in Central Ohio

City Attorney Zach Klein, County Prosecuting Attorney Shayla D. Favor, Columbus Office of Violence Prevention to convene community and advocates at Linden Community Center

COLUMBUS, OH— City Attorney Zach Klein, County Prosecuting Attorney Shayla D. Favor, and Columbus Office of Violence Prevention Director Rena Shak will host a Big Table conversation tomorrow, Tuesday, September 29, at 11 a.m. at the Linden Community Center. The community conversation will bring together law enforcement, community leaders, and advocates in the anti-domestic violence space to discuss ways to come together to address domestic violence in Central Ohio, from education and awareness campaigns to improving the justice system.

The event is part of The Big Table, an annual community-wide day of conversation sponsored by the Columbus Foundation. These events are designed to inspire civic engagement and connection on various issues and topics. It is free and open to the public and media.
