Lawrence Argent honing the clay mold to the desired shape. The mold will be used to create a fiberglass cast, which will be used to shape the many pieces of stainless steel that will be welded, grinded, sanded and polished to create the final artwork.

At its widest point the head of the sculpture measures just under seven feet. It requires internal support to keep it from collapsing under its own weight.

The finished piece undergoing its finish work – note the difference in polish levels between the lips and the rest of the piece.
