

COLUMBUS & FRANKLIN COUNTY ADDICTION PLAN

Bridging the Cap for Opiate & Drug Addiction Recovery

Greetings from the Health Commissioner

These are challenging times – especially for those living with addiction. For more than two years, COVID-19 changed our world and daily lives. The added stress and isolation from the pandemic were difficult for all of us. But it has been particularly hard – and deadly – for those fighting the brain disease of addiction.

Thousands of people overdosed in our community – and tragically, many died. As we continue to deal with the effects and aftermath of the pandemic, the epidemic of addiction and overdose is still raging in our community.

Preventing overdose is a complex issue – and there are no quick or easy fixes to a problem that continues to take mothers and fathers, sons and daughters, friends, neighbors and coworkers from those who love them most. No one is immune – and there are no quick solutions or easy answers. But as we continue to fight this battle on all fronts, we must renew our collective commitment to providing critical services to those battling addiction. We all have a role to play to end overdoses and save lives.

Overdose deaths are preventable. We must continue to expand access to the life-saving medication Narcan. You never know when you will need it. And for those who have lived to see another day and are ready to enter treatment, we can help. The Columbus and Franklin County Addiction Plan partners can link you to medical detoxification, recovery housing, and resources to achieve sobriety and sustain it. And, we must all commit to reducing stigma around the disease of addiction and ending overdose and overdose deaths in our community, once and for all.

We can do it together. We have a clear vision and collective purpose through the Columbus & Franklin County Addiction Plan, and Columbus Public Health is proud to lead this critical effort.

Mysheika W. Roberts, MD, MPH Health Commissioner

A Message from the Mayor

The opioid crisis continues to plague vulnerable populations across America, throughout Ohio and right here in Columbus. It is important to note that, both nationwide and locally, we saw an unprecedented increase in overdose deaths during the COVID-19 pandemic – with a significant increase in the African American community, in particular. The pandemic laid bare countless inequities in our country, and this is but one example of a specific population being disproportionately impacted by challenges and hardship.

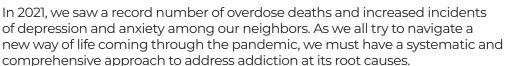

Despite this startling reality, individuals and agencies are undeterred, going above and beyond to help those in need and combat these crises. Members of the public health community are reaching out to residents; hosting pop-up events to distribute Narcan, Fentanyl test strips and COVID-19 vaccines; providing critical testing services, and more. I was fortunate to participate in one of the annual "Walk In for Recovery" events, which doubled the number of individuals served in 2021 – a remarkable feat by any conceivable measure. The compassion of our community is second to none.

The fight against addiction will continue, but I am inspired by the work that has already been done, and I am confident we will make even greater strides in this important work. Together, through kindness and cooperation, we are improving and saving lives in our community.

Andrew J. Ginther Mayor of Columbus

A Message from the Franklin County Board of Commissioners

The past two years have been a tumultuous period as our community has faced dual public health crises – the COVID-19 pandemic and a worsening addiction crisis. Individuals have experienced increased mental health and addiction struggles and as a result, overdose incidents and the death rate have increased.

We understand that there is no one magical solution to address this crisis – instead it will take elected leaders, public-private partnerships, the nonprofit community, and those most affected by addiction working together in a comprehensive way to tackle this problem.

Erica Crawley Franklin County Commissioner

Overview

Led by Columbus Public Health, the Columbus & Franklin County Addiction Plan has worked tirelessly over the past two years to prevent drug overdoses and overdose deaths. The Plan is supported by a principal committee of city and county officials, including Columbus Mayor Andrew J. Ginther, the Franklin County Commissioners' Office, Columbus City Attorney Zach Klein, Chief Executive Officer of the Franklin County Alcohol, Drug and Mental Health Board Erika Clark Jones, and Franklin County Health Commissioner Joe Mazzola, as well as subcommittees charged with investigating innovative practices and providing recommendations to help reduce drug overdoses deaths, overdoses and infectious diseases. Subcommittee members also are charged with implementing systemic changes in their organizations to support equitable access and substance use treatment.

The initial 2020-2021 Columbus & Franklin County Addiction Plan focused on conducting health equity, health system and population interventions with a focus on public health methodology. Members of the C&FCAP also identified evidenced-based practices to improve and expand serving individuals with substance use disorder, including:

- · Naloxone Distribution
- Fentanyl Test Strip Distribution
- · HIV/EIS Testing
- · Syringe Collection
- · Prevention Education Programs in Local Schools
- · Collaborative Community Events
- Diversion Opportunities for People of Color with Substance Use Disorder into Specialized Docket Programs and Treatment
- · Medical Practices and Organizations that Adopt Screening and Prescribing Guidelines
- Education on Adverse Childhood Experiences, Trauma-Informed Care, Mental Health and Substance Use

Background Data:

Since 2011:

- · Ohio 37,000 drug overdose deaths to date
- Franklin County 4.160 of those deaths or 11.2% of state total

2019: Franklin County - 547 overdose deaths

2020: Franklin County - 804 overdose deaths

- · 68% increase
- · Fentanyl involved in 81% of deaths
- · Not every death included heroin or an opioid such as Oxycotin or Percocet.
- 20% of deaths were among individuals who were using cocaine that was likely, unknowingly contaminated with Fentanyl.
- 17% were using stimulants like methamphetamine that were likely adulterated with Fentanyl.

Goals of Columbus & Franklin County Addiction Plan:

- · Reduce overdose deaths
- · Reduce overdoses
- · Reduce infectious diseases like Hepatitis and HIV.

Through the commitment of each Columbus & Franklin County Addiction Plan member and the leadership of local elected officials, subcommittees conducted interventions with targeted objectives that helped achieve the plan's goals.

Looking Ahead

Plan Overview • 2022-2025

The goals for the 2022-2025 remain the same and will continue to focus on helping people obtain substance use disorder treatment, harm reduction services, and access to integrated healthcare.

Goals

- Reduce overdose deaths by 15%
- Decrease drug overdose incidents by 15%
- · Decrease infectious diseases like Hep C and HIV/AIDS by 10%

The goals are based upon data from 2021 with a decrease of 15%, 15%, and 10% annually. Goals will be every three years, instead of every two.

The goals and metrics collected and reported to the community align directly with the Ohio Department of Health's long-term health outcomes to reduce unintentional drug overdose deaths.

Each Columbus & Franklin County Addiction Plan subcommittee is responsible for ensuring that the goals, metrics and objectives are actionable, captured and realistic with the timeframe set forth by the Principal Committee, and that interventions align with the Ohio Department of Health Overdose Prevention Network.
